Your alma-mater recalls you

.....Rustic old benches, dusty green chalkboards, 5-minute gossip between subsequent lectures, uneasy silence during the viva, canteen raids in the break, random and planned bunks with friends, and open lunch boxes protected from teachers' eyes. Is this how you also spent your golden years of college life? Just how nostalgic it is to remember enrolling ourselves for long years of meticulous study sessions and panicking during exams but ending up making the best of the best memories to hold onto forever. Those late-night assignments, back and forth wandering for getting the journals checked, hiding the broken glassware in labs, climbing past the wall for worldly famous Raturaj's tea and maskabun, rehearsing for talent evenings, and the literal struggle behind making those tedious notes and copying journals have sown a very deep relationship with this campus and the memories built here have reserved a remarkable place in our hearts. Beyond everything the daily banter at AES J block, Gujarat University Girls Hostel and LT Munshaw hostel, sharing home-brought nasta with everyone mostly under peer pressure, eagerly waiting for those royal Sunday feasts, and cycling at midnight under dimming street lights just to get a cup of tea made the hostel a "home away from home". The years spent at LMCP have not only instilled discipline, dedication, sincerity, and a drive to stay exceptional from the crowd but also made us experience the prime time of our lives. The education and training provided by our alma mater have helped us in overcoming all the hurdles and paved our paths swiftly towards success. But above everything, it is those teachers who pulled our ears on every mistake, those friendships that helped us finish long overdue journals, those mid-lecture stories that gave us a much-needed break, those all-nighters we pulled together during exams, those tears we cried together and those silly yet hilarious laughter sessions contributed in who we are as an individual today. So, it is that time of the year to re-highlight the memories the way you highlight all the important notes.

It is the time to sit together again on those old rustic benches and relive that glorious era. Reminisce all those blissful moments by joining in the Alumni meet-up scheduled on 6th and 7th January 2023.
